sixty years after understanding media marshall mcluhan remains one of the best known and most influential intellectuals of the twentieth century far beyond academia readers and non readers recognize his coinages such as the gutenber era the global village and the medium is the message a literary scholar by profession mcluhan was one of the first academics to recognize the new opportunities offered by radio and television to reach audiences beyond the readerships of scholarly journals his talks and appearances ushered in public intellectual debate concerning the electronic age although his reputation waned in the 1970s the recent making available to the public of his extraordinary personal library of some six thousand books enables new kinds of analyses of mcluhan as a reader thinker and cultural force the essays here focus not so much on his media theory per se as on the habits and practices that animated his reading and on the larger questions of what reading and not reading mean we don't need to agree with everything McLuhan says to make valuable use of his work new resources offer us an unprecedented opportunity to revisit one fallible human reader whose texts and ideas are good to think with and against this book was originally published as a special issue of the journal Textual Practice against the backdrop of climate change and tectonic political shifts in world politics this handbook provides an overview of the most crucial geopolitical and security related issues in the arctic it discusses established shareholder's policies in the arctic those of Russia Canada the USA Denmark and Norway as well as the politics and interests of other significant or future stakeholders including China and India furthermore it explains the economic situation and the legal framework that governs the arctic and the claims that arctic states have made in order to expand their territories and exclusive economic zones while illustrating the collaborative approach represented by institutions such as the Arctic Council which has often been described as an exceptional institution in this region the contributing authors examine potential resource and power conflicts between arctic nations due to competing interests the authors also address topics such as changing alliances between arctic nations new sea lines of communication technological shifts and eventually the return to power politics in the area written by experts on international security studies and the arctic as well as practitioners from government institutions and international organizations the book provides an invaluable source of information for anyone interested in geopolitical shifts and security issues in the high north unceded is a compelling history of the BC government's relationship with indigenous peoples from early land question disputes to current reconciliation efforts treaty commissioner George M. Abbott combines archival research with a former cabinet minister's insider perspective on government to chronicle over 150 years of BC indigenous relations he details how early government officials refused to negotiate treaties instead coercing first nations onto small reserves despite sustained indigenous resistance the situation only worsened in the decades that followed until several supreme court decisions compelled the province to sit down at the negotiating table more recently the province has taken steps toward reconciliation including passing legislation recognizing indigenous rights as abbot shows overcoming the legacy of colonialism is no small task but achieving justice is worth the effort unceded will help all british columbians understand historical wrongs and the obstacles to righting them canadian literature and medicine breaks new ground by formulating a series of frameworks with which to read and interpret a national literature derived from the very fabric of that literature in this case canadian literature is of particular interest because of its consideration of coloniality indigeneity and coincident development alongside a nascent socialized medical system currently under threat from neoliberalism the first chapters of the book carefully track the development of canada s socialized medical system as it manifests in the imaginations of the nation s poets and authors who depict care reciprocal flows are investigated in which these poets and authors are quoted in policy documents the archive based methodology is sustained in subsequent chapters that rely upon a unique interdisciplinary mix of medical history philosophy of medicine medical policy theory inherent to the field of canadian literature focusing in particular on the garrison mentality as a form of aesthetic protest and the feminist ethics of care and indigenous ways of knowing union and offers points of comparison with Canada and North and South America

This book analyses the possibilities and limitations that sub-national actors face when developing diplomatic activities in the Arctic region. Sub-national actors such as civil society groups and sub-national governments or administrations have been active in international relations for decades. They face specific political and economic limitations on the international scene as non-sovereign entities. This book investigates how these actors have developed their international presence in the Arctic region. It analyzes the diplomatic activities of states, provinces, regional administrations, and multilateral forums made of sub-national governments to offer comparative insights on the strategies, interests, and activities of sub-national governments. Alaska, Scotland, Quebec, Yakutsk, and Indigenous People's organizations are among the examples covered in this book that have forged bilateral and multilateral relations to promote and defend their interests and values. Moreover, sovereign states are often using these sub-national actors to further their own interests, as exemplified in this book in how Russia and China harnessed the potential of sub-national governments to align with their Arctic policies. The volume will be useful to academics and graduate students of Arctic politics, international relations, comparative politics, comparative federalism, foreign policy, and global governance.
